

Accessibility

There is growing appreciation that the benefits of transportation systems should be measured in terms of the access and connections that they provide to job, commerce and personal activity opportunities, rather than merely the value of time and cost savings. EBP (formerly EDR Group) has been at the forefront of developing methods to assess these benefits and their productivity consequences.