

Pandemic Impacts

At EBP, we have been studying the dynamics of the COVID-19 pandemic and advising clients on how transportation-related economics may be affected.

Our ongoing research and analysis have provided insights on needs and issues revealed by the pandemic in areas as diverse as accessibility and mobility, supply chains, economic development and jobs, and airport economics. Our consulting work has encompassed both national-scale and local-level engagements, reflecting the multi-dimensional impacts of the pandemic.

This special section of our website provides information on our pandemic-related research, analysis, and consulting projects. We will add more content as our work continues. We encourage you to use this information to inform your own efforts to adapt to the post-pandemic world and share it as appropriate with your colleagues and partners.
